Balancing Infill with Amenity

Supporting Social Infrastructure

Vulnerabilities for On-Street Parkers

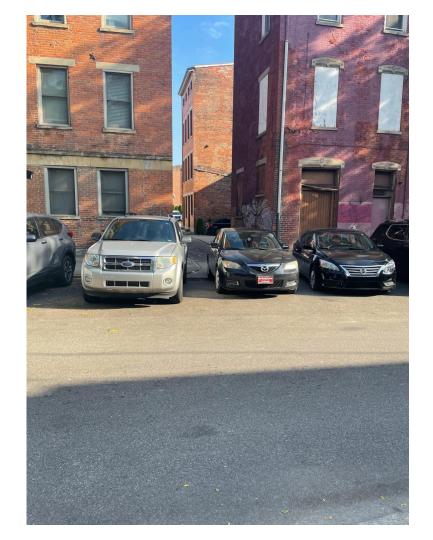

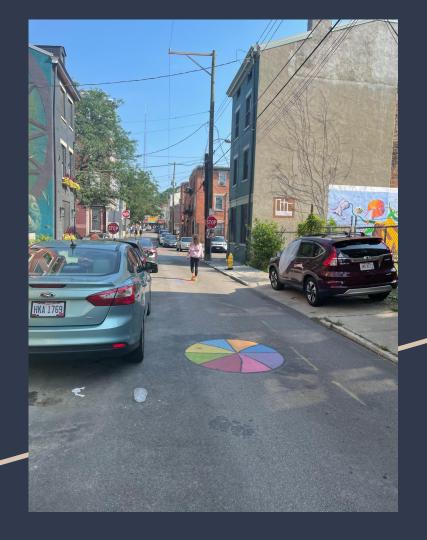

- Vandalism & Theft
- Tickets & Towing
- Time spent finding and walking to & from street spots.
- Traffic Accidents from congestion due to residents competing with neighbors & non-residents who want to access the neighborhood.

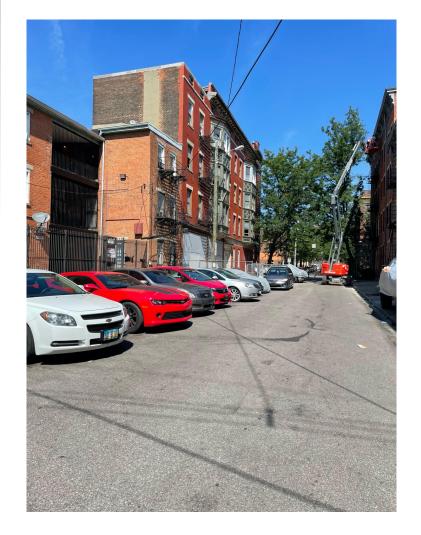

Where can residents without access to off-street parking park their cars?

- Residential Permit Program (up to $60/year; no guest passes; limit of 2 per household; not guaranteed open spots)
- Paid private parking (between $55-115/month; often waitlisted; not guaranteed open spots; limited during events [Findlay weekends; FCC games])
- North of Liberty: free spots but competing with thousands of non-residents going to FC games & Findlay Market as well as hundreds of Findlay Market employees

Housing Crisis/Financing/Infill/ Displacement

- Economic Development's priority is for high-density infill in OTR city-owned properties are being sold to non-resident developers that are making apartments smaller (between 300-600 square feet [a 'small' apartment is considered 800-1000 square feet]). Photo shows a city-owned building sold to a developer in 2020 no work has been started on the 8-unit micro-apartment, no off-street parking development. Poison Ivy is currently growing onto the sidewalk.
- With smaller units, developers can make more of them so we're seeing 8-, 10-, and 12-unit apartment developments go into the same spaces that used to fit 3- to 5 unit buildings.
- The city lifted a requirement for developers to include parking facilities so most new developments do not provide parking.
- 3CDCs Wilkommen development added 36 units to a street that can fit 11 cars on-street. There was no parking provided to tenants & there are no laundry facilities on-site. The closest laundromat is in Mount Adams, 2 miles away. Another 15-unit 3CDC is under construction in the same district.
- While these units offer affordable rate housing, they are not providing amenities for residents: parking, laundry, greenspace.
- Because of the struggle to find parking, residents are collecting tickets for parking on sidewalks, blocking lanes, blocking fire hydrants.
- The properties with off-street parking are largely single-family residences & are high market-value properties.
- On-street parkers gain tickets, stress, unstable housing; off-street parkers gain equity.

How to Balance Infill with Amenity

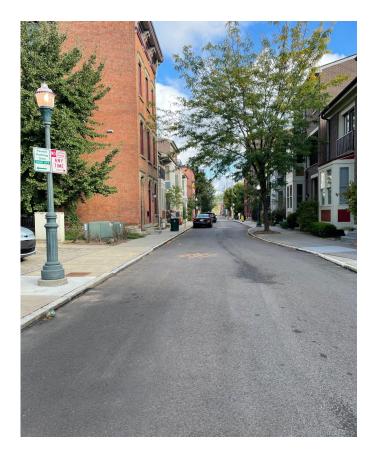

- Goal: Provide easy, accessible, inexpensive parking to all residents of OTR.
- Limit density on streets with limited on-street parking.
- Convert city-owned vacant lots to HOA-type co-ops of residents that could be used as residential parking, garden beds, bike storage, handyman-parking, child-care parking, and guest spots.
- Require high-density infill projects that do not choose to provide parking offer alternatives: affordable-rate housing to tenants without cars or make the building car-free (rental agreement commits tenants to not owning a car), but provide a car-sharing program.
- Open city-owned surface lots and 3CDC lots to RPPP overflow; charge more to non-residents to make up the income loss.
- Charge all non-residents for curb-parking; use that income to pay for residential permits and other improvements (sidewalks, lighting, utility cables under the sidewalks).
- Market the riverfront garages and free streetcar to non-residents for inexpensive parking alternatives to high-priced OTR parking.
- Incentivize (tax abatements) vacant lot owners to give easements to neighbors that could park on the backs of their properties in districts that do not have back-lanes.
- Lease curb spots to residents; paint stalls for clarity and enforcement.

Where it's already working...

- Pleasant St between 14th and 15th: 3CDC's City Homes provided garages for this development & added a tree to the sidewalk! Utility lines are under the sidewalk; adequate off-street parking ensures the street regularly has a curb spot for guests, utility workers, hospice workers, childcare workers.
- Elm St between 14th and Liberty: backlanes and limited density allows RPPP to offer residents open spots regularly - even during FCC games.
- How can we provide the same amenities to residents in districts of OTR that are out of balance, leaving neighbors struggling to find safe, accessible, inexpensive parking?
- Businesses on these streets do not provide parking for their customers.
- Residents are the customers.
