Equitable Encounters Program

Equitable Encounters

Equitable Encounters is a youth-centered civic education and empowerment initiative developed by The Holloman Center for Social Justice (CSJ) in collaboration with civic, legal, and creative partners. The program is designed to equip driver-aged high school students with essential knowledge of their individual rights and practical, real-world guidance for navigating safe and informed encounters with law enforcement officers.

- Educate students about their individual rights when encountering law enforcement officers
- Foster a sense of confidence and assertiveness in students when interacting with the police
- Promote understanding in dialogue between students and law enforcement officers
- Provide practical tips and strategies for de-escalating tense situations during encounters with the police
- Encourage students to empower themselves to imagine innovative solutions to the criminal legal system
- Enhance students' knowledge of the criminal legal system and their role as informed citizens

University of Cincinnati (UC) Master of Public Administration (MPA) Partnership

The CSJ is partnering with the UC's MPA Program through a capstone collaboration supporting the Equitable Encounters Program. Two UC MPA Fellows are providing research, stakeholder analysis, data analysis, and strategic recommendations to strengthen youth-law enforcement relationships, enhance community engagement, and education.
